Form of introduction

"My name is X. I'm from Essex/London University. We're preparing a report (writing a book) about standards of living in Britain today and how families manage. We think it's important for the Government and everyone else to know what the facts really are. We're hoping to talk to about 3,000 families throughout the country and I'd be very grateful if you could help us by answering some questions. All our information is, of course, strictly confidential."

QUESTION 23 Poor now

Stress genuinely and try to avoid facetiousness at this point. Question 23 (a) explores what the informant understands by feeling "poor". If the word "poor" seems inappropriate use the alternative "very hard up".

QUESTION 24 Poverty

Stress the word "poverty". Do not explain what you think it means if you are asked. Seek from the informant his definition and write it in the box as clearly as you can.

QUESTION 25 Voting

Ask for those old enough to have voted in the last election (March 1965). We are not concerned who they voted for (although they will probably say) but would like to know if they are sufficiently involved to vote at all. Be careful to reassure people that this is confidential and as far as you are concerned non-voting is blameless—many people consider that voting is legally compulsory or morally obligatory and so voting figures are over-estimated. Try to get a clear recollection by fixing the incident (time of day, who they went with) if necessary. Stress National, not local elections.

QUESTION 26 Action on poverty

We are interested in what the informant thinks can be done. Give as full an answer as possible.

Please write in any additional notes.

This household is situated in a small street of grey stone tenements immediately behind a busy main artery, consequently the traffic is heavy, lorries park outside the window & the noise is troublesome. The district is lower middle-class, going downhill. The flat is very bright, well modernised and the furniture quite new. About £900 was spent installing bathroom, sink fitting, radiator, fireplace etc soon after the marriage 6-7 years ago. Then the couple went to South Africa on holiday, where respondent spent 30 years (her first marriage.)

The husband spends most of the morning in bed, gets up briefly, rests again all afternoon & gets up about 5 for his dinner & waffles till bedtime. He was quite clear-minded about his working days & which programmes he enjoys but found questioning difficult. The wife is rather stressed, finds it hard to manage financially, and has an ambivalent attitude to her husband. On the one hand she is grateful to him & appreciates all he has done for her. On the other, she finds life lonely, finds his occasional incontinence troublesome, worries he'll fall when she's out. They live a very isolated life & she is determined to return to South Africa eventually, though her next up her mind to keep him at home as long as possible. The family doctor only comes if sent for (I suspect his advice was to put the husband into an institution last year) and this they both reject.

Her second marriage grew out of her job as housekeeper to a disabled man and lasted three years.

In view of the husband's need for warmth & his incontinence, I suggested she might try for a special grant for bedclothes and an additional weekly sum for heatings have asked her to let me know what happens so that the matter may perhaps be further pursued. She was not anxious for him to have a voluntary visitor when she is out, as she worries he'll fall going to the door. This is understandable. But the old man asked me to come back, rather suggesting a new face would be welcome.
